PRESS KIT

2008

COLLABO is a collective of visual performance artists.

Taught by Dutch designers, MACHINE, and comprised of UCLA Design | Media Arts alumni. They weave experimental media techniques with analog foundations. Narrative-based cinematics and highly-tailored motion work, enhanced by custom written software, create a strikingly synesthetic experience between what you hear and what you see. These visuals are performed live by up to 20 of the collaborating artists, making each performance a unique event.

MISSION STATEMENT

Their music shares a secret. We share their stories. Heavily dependent on the innovation of sound and technology over the last several years, artists at COLLABO have reinvented sight, just as others in have reinvented sound, but finally together. Among the past several years remixing has emerged as not only a culture defined by just music, but also an alternative style of life that has developed from classical anthologies to present beliefs. We are a collective of recycling, borrowing, making, and mixing. COLLABO's work re-contextualizes artistic invention and produces innovative creations in every way.

From Los Angeles and beyond, consisting of a total of twenty different media artists, COLLABO commitments include providing live visual performance artists, time based visual and CG artists, experimental filmmakers and installation work. We create for technical and artistic experimentation as well as for the merging of our community's and our own aesthetic taste-making appeal. Collaborations play with cross-overs from print to motion, old school to contemporary, and nightclubs to the streets themselves. COLLABO doesn't present names or faces, it presents a new culture of sight and sound.
